Fourteenth Sunday in Ordinary Time (Year B)

Gospel: Mark 6:1-6

Jesus was back in his home town and teaching in the synagogue. How did the people feel when they heard him speaking? They were very surprised. They couldn't understand how Jesus, who they had known since he was a little boy, could have so much wisdom and teach so well. Why do you think the people were so surprised? They thought that they knew who Jesus was – the son of Joseph the carpenter. They thought Jesus was just an ordinary man, but he wasn't. Why not? The people could not accept that Jesus was special. They did not believe in him.

Sometimes when we know someone really well we can forget how special they are. It can be hard to see past all the things we know about them, to what they are really like. And sometimes we forget how special the things that we do are, because they just feel ordinary to us.

Can you think of something special that someone you know really well does – it could be a friend or a family member or someone else?

And can you think of one ordinary thing that you do, that others might see as special?

The people listening to Jesus in the reading judge him because of who he is and where he comes from. They are not willing to listen to him or to change their minds, even though he shows wisdom in his teaching.

Do you think this is right? Why not?

Have you ever made your mind up about someone just because of where they came from? Or has it happened to you – that people have judged you because of who your family are or where you come from?

Perhaps if children can play together peacefully, then when they are grown up they can work together peacefully as adults too.

Maybe this week we can try to see how special the people around us are. The people we know really well – our friends and family – who do lots of special things, even though we sometimes don't notice.

And this week, let's try not to judge anyone for where they come from or who their family is, but instead listen to them, look out for the special things that they do, and see what we can learn from them.
